Entering Year _____

MA DEGREE REQUIREMENTS

The program covers selective fields of Teaching Asian Languages. These fields include Teaching Chinese, Teaching Korean, and Teaching Japanese.

Time to Degree: Full time students with no deficiencies upon admission to graduate status who carry a standard course load should be able to obtain the MA degree within three quarters. The maximum time to degree is six quarters.

MA Language Requirement: Students in the Teaching Asian Languages MA must demonstrate competence in relevant languages as detailed below:

Students in Teaching Chinese must demonstrate competence in modern Chinese (equivalent to successful completion of Chinese 101B).

Students in Teaching Japanese must demonstrate competence in modern Japanese (equivalent to successful completion of Japanese 101B).

Students in Teaching Korean must demonstrate competence in modern Korean (equivalent to successful completion of Korean 101B).

Language competence may be demonstrated by college level language class transcripts or an examination administered by an authorized UCLA faculty.

Please indicate below how you fulfilled this requirement (Coursework, native speaker, waived by advisor, etc.)

MA Course Requirements

A total of nine courses (or 36 units) are required for the degree. Students can fulfill the course requirements by completing four core courses (200-level) on Asian language linguistics and pedagogy, three teaching practicum courses at UCLA, and two elective courses (upper division or 200-level).

Two electives can be taken from the ALC Department and/or other departments (e.g., Linguistics, Applied Linguistics, or School of Education). Specific courses are to be negotiated with advisor/committee. Two upper division courses are applied toward the University's nine-course minimum requirement for Master's degrees.

Students must take:

- Asian 200: Research Methods in East Asian Language Pedagogy

- Asian 204A: Issues and Practices in Teaching Asian Languages
- Asian 204B: Issues and Practices in Teaching Asian Languages
- Asian 206A: Instructional Apprenticeship in Teaching Asian Languages
- Asian 206B: Instructional Apprenticeship in Teaching Asian Languages
- Asian 206C: Instructional Apprenticeship in Teaching Asian Languages
- One of the Chinese, Japanese, or Korean linguistics courses (Chinese C240/Japanese C223/Korean C220)

Remaining two elective courses (upper division or 200-level) may be chosen from the ALC Department, Linguistics, Applied Linguistics, or School of Education.

A list of recommended/suggested elective courses is as follows:

M.A. Committee - Your M.A.. Committee must be approved by the Director of Graduate Studies/Chair before taking the comprehensive exam. The committee must consist of a minimum of three faculty members from UCLA. Please submit the Nomination of Comprehensive Exam Committee to SAO.

Committee Members: 1. _____, CHAIR
2. _____
3. _____

Capstone Plan

Once all language (either by coursework or translation report) and course requirements are satisfied and your committee has been approved, the comprehensive examination may be taken.

Students, in consultation with their faculty adviser, must determine their three comprehensive examination fields (e.g., acquisition of grammar as opposed to phonological development of L2 speakers and use of pragmatic markers). The comprehensive examination, which emphasizes diverse areas of study, consists of the submission of three research papers (at least one language pedagogy paper and two seminar papers) to be evaluated by the ad hoc committee chaired by the student's principal adviser. One of the three papers can be written in the target language, but this is optional.
